Citizens Learn ABC's of Bond Issue

by Mary Lou Williamson

The proposed $6 million bond issue will give the city "the opportunity to take care of some pressing needs. The council is unanimous in supporting the bond issue and we hope you will support it too," Councilman Thomas X. White told Citizens For Greenbelt at their annual meeting on Thursday, March 21. More than 50 members filled the council chambers to hear Mayor Gil Weidenfeld and White spell out the ABC's of the bond issue — what will it buy, how much will it cost, why now, some history and background. But first the citizens received a short course in municipal finance from Norton Bonaparte, consultant with the University of Maryland's Governmental Services Institute. (See separate story.)

The $6 million bond issue, carefully balanced by council, would provide $2 million for construction and major building improvements, $2 million for a new indoor pool and some renovation of the outdoor pool, and $2 million for parkland acquisition and development. While those figures could vary slightly, council seems determined to maintain the balance.

What Will It Buy?

Under the "bricks and mortar" category the largest project is a new police station. "With a rapidly growing department and city, the current building is now totally inadequate," Weidenfeld stated. (See story, page 1). The other large project is rehabilitation of the North End School—expected uses are a day care center, recreation facilities and a senior center. Additional projects include more storage space for equipment and salt for the public works department, locker facilities for women at the Youth Center and improved lockers for men. "Women have not had much opportunity to make use of the gym facilities because of the poor locker situation," Weidenfeld explained. Also in this category is money for purchase and renovation of an original Greenbelt home for use as a museum.

The second category — swimming pools — includes a new indoor pool and some renovation of the outdoor pool, chiefly the bathhouse.

"At our public hearing last October, someone said the best way to define the character of Greenbelt is our parks and green space," said White. He listed several potential green space areas which might be purchased—the Pepco substation between Crescent Road and the lake, parts of parcels 1 and 2 to extend the Northway Ball Fields complex, or buffer strips in east Greenbelt (or school sites there, which might be obtained at little or no cost if determined to be surplus by the school board.) White also spoke of parkland development needs—completion of the walkway/bike trail system, the perimeter trail in the North End, the Northway Ball Fields, development of Schrom Hills Park and improvements to Braden Field.

GREENBELT CO-OP ANNUAL MEETING

The first annual meeting of the members of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative Inc. will take place at 1 p.m. on Saturday, March 30 in the council room of the Municipal Building.

The purpose of the meeting is to provide information on the status of the Co-op, including reports from the chairman, treasurer, supermarket manager and service station manager. After the reports election of the Board of Directors will be held, followed by comments, questions, and motions from the members.

Door prizes will be awarded, light refreshments will be served.

A Quick Course

by Mary Lou Williamson

Norton Bonaparte, a consultant from the University of Maryland's Institute of Governmental Studies, offered the Citizens For Greenbelt a quick course in municipal finance.

There are three means of financing government, he stated: taxes, transfer of funds from other levels of government (state, federal), and borrowing. The first two are used to finance current or annual expenditures and make up the operating budget. If a project is larger or has a longer lifetime than a year, it is called a "capital expenditure" and is frequently paid for by borrowing. For an individual, Bonaparte explained, this kind of item might be a car or a home; for a government, a school, highway or sewage plant.

There are several types of bonds depending on the purpose. General obligation, or G.O., bonds require the "full faith and credit" of a city and a clear statement of intent to repay the bonds with city taxes. In other words, the loan is paid off by all of the citizens of the community because the money has been used to benefit all the citizens.

Revenue bonds are used to finance such projects as a housing project or a sewer system. Here fees are charged to those citizens who directly benefit (live in the houses or use the sewer system, for example) and those fees pay for the bonds.

The process for sale of G.O. bonds would be first to determine what the city wants to do and See COURSE, page 3, col. 3

County Peace Fair

by Bert Donn

This Saturday, March 30, from 1-4 p.m., the first Prince Georges County Peace Fair, hosted by the Greenbelt Peace Committee, will take place at the Greenbelt Library. The fair is free and open to all. There will be activities for the young in years and the young in heart. Displays, films, slides and videos will provide information on activities of county groups working for a peaceful community and world. Other events will offer entertainment and promote a spirit of unity and cooperation.

Among the 25 groups contributing to the fair, those centered in Greenbelt are the Community Church, Baha'i Assembly, Greenbelt-Rezekne Exchange Project, Prince Georges County Nuclear Weapons Freeze, and Gray Panthers. Greenbelt musician Neil Harpe will also be performing.

The festivities will include face painting, clowns, puppetry, music, and creative artwork. A giant balloon launch will end the fair. For more information, please call 474-6890 or 345-2522.

Crowded Quarters Hamper Police; Bond Issue Would Pay for Building

A new police station is one of the major capital improvements for Greenbelt to be financed by the proposed six million dollar bond issue. Citizens will vote in referendum on May 14 either to approve or to reject the entire bond issue. During the coming weeks a series of articles on the needs and projects to be included in the bond issue will appear in this newspaper. For the first in the series, our reporter Andrea Edie has interviewed Greenbelt's Chief of Police Frank Hutson, asking the question "Why do we need a new station?"

by Andrea Edie

"The day the department moved into these facilities, they were 10 years behind," according to Greenbelt Police Chief Frank Hutson. "We need to catch up with the growing city." There are now 10 more employees in the department than when the space was enlarged and remodeled about six years ago.

The facilities of the Greenbelt Police Department are inadequate based on national standards, the chief said.

The police department now occupies one-fourth of the Municipal building and has the boiler room in one corner. As the boiler room is checked daily, the chief explained, the maintenance man must walk through the area where police records are kept.

"The records should be isolated, but they are lined up against the wall of the secretary's office," he said.

The squad room serves three purposes instead of one. Now, the squad room is used for roll call, report writing and citizen reports. "The citizen has the priority," the chief said, and that "knocks the other two out."

"There is no privacy for rape victims," he said, "while one detective is interviewing a victim, the other two detectives have to stand in the hall and wait." This same small office will eventually accommodate five detectives.

Another problem with the too-small facilities is the holding cell which does not provide a separate place for male and female offenders who are being held until the county police pick them up. "We can't put them together," he said, "but we do take the less violent and have an officer stand guard over them."

Possible New Sites

A number of locations for a new police building have been mentioned over the past year, but council has made no decisions. One location, North End School, thought to be a possibility, has pretty well been stricken. That location, according to the city manager, is not "strategic"—that is, not central to all points in the city. Further, it is in the midst of a residential area and therefore inappropriate for those occasional times when a squad car needs to speed off from the station in response to an emergency (usually the cars are already out on the road). Remodeling the old school building would present further problems, the manager added.

Several points along Crescent Road are possible. The city already owns a site between the St. Hugh's rectory and the firehouse. The old Pepco substation plot, which council has been attempting to purchase, would require additional land now part of the Lake Park. Other possible sites would involve land purchased with open space grants. The city would need to obtain permission to use land for a police station or pay back the open space money used. Among the potential spots are parcel 7, across from the entrance to the Lake Park and parcel 8, north of Crescent Road between Ridge Road and Kenilworth Avenue.

Putting the station on Greenbelt Road in order to minimize the distance to the east and west portions of Greenbelt would probably be too costly as the city would have to purchase very expensive land.

Charette is Under Way

The charette, in which community participants and architecture technicians get together to plan and execute a design plan for the Roosevelt Center Mall is underway. A citizen survey is to be accomplished in late April with a random telephone survey and an in-person survey in the Center Mall. The logistics committee has planned the tour route of the city which will include Springhill Lake, Greenway Shopping Center, and other areas outside of the center itself. The tour is to be part of the orientation for the architects and technicians participating in the charette. Publicity on the event has gone out in various professional newsletters and a number of technicians have indicated interest in participating.

Citizens may still join or attend planning committee meetings. Contact Jim Parker, survey team, 345-9573; Noreen Yoch, logistics team, 682-8839; Konrad Herling, 345-9369, design team.

James Eddins

James Eddins, age 45, died at his home in Monrovia, Maryland on March 13. A native of Greenbelt, Md. Eddins lived in the city until about a year ago and continued to work in Greenbelt.

He is survived by his wife Susan and children Jennifer, 9, and Travis, 4½, of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Daffan, Hillside Road; brother George, Greenbelt; and sister, Mary Blue of Laurel.

He worked on many construction projects in Greenbelt, including the recent GHI Rehabilitation.

Ooh, the Weight of It All!

To the Editor:

Recently this newspaper ran a story which began "Veteran long distance runner, Alexander Barnes . . ." which has caused me to be the victim of comments on my age which border on slander. Comments about entering middle age were the kinder ones. . . .

I was spared in some measure by the fact that this story of great interest was buried in the middle of the newspaper. However, most experienced readers of the NEWS REVIEW skip the first page anyway, knowing that that is where the newspaper puts its most boring material, GHI and City Council meetings and the like.

In addition there were those who noticed that I was getting slower. Perhaps, they said most cruelly of all, it was because I was carrying more weight. Let me obliterate that canard.

The reason I am slower than the others is because I have refused to get a second-mortgage on the house in order to pay for the new equipment being worn by the modern (and sometimes younger) runners. Let me describe to you the tremendous handicap I face every time I get out to compete against others who are restrained by no spending limit. I do tend to spend substantially on shoes. On the day of the race I was wearing a pair for which I paid $45, back when the dollar was worth something. These are generally available for $25 except that I have to buy an extra-wide size. What kind of chance do I have against those trodding along in ultralight, soft-cushion shoes for which they paid $100?

It was a cool day, so that underneath my Sears $5 running shorts I wore my trusty long-johns which I brought with me when I migrated from New England a couple of decades ago. Is it any wonder that I would be passed by those wearing Dolphin Running Shorts ($15) over their Moss Brown Running Tights ($25) " . . . with a non-binding body-hugging Lycra/Nylon blend . . . "? I realize I may look a little funny in my old long-johns, but what about those guys running around in panty-hose?

My tee-shirt was one which I had received for having completed the marathon in one of the previous years, which had the catchy phrase "Washington's Birthday Marathon". Humor is a serious requirement for the marathoner. So, I was clearly put down by those passing who had invested $10 or more in such as "Marathoners Keep It Up Longer". Many of these weren't seen because of the tops worn over them. For the first part of the race I wore my Sears $15 sweat-shirt. I watched with envy those wearing their Gore-Tex Unisex (honest, I didn't make that up) Jackets with their Egyptian cotton spun in for $170.

My gloves are those made for gardening and sold by Mr. Harry for less than $2. For only ten times as much I could have gotten exactly the same gloves except that they would have said "Bill Rodgers" on them.

Well, we all have to make sacrifices.

Citizens Learn About City Bonds

in 1977, but the bond market was bleak. Today, Weidenfeld thinks everything looks good. Because interest rates are lower, the city would have to pay less to borrow the money. With a rapidly growing tax base, he said, citizens will be paying a declining share of the taxes. Lastly, the combined county-city tax burden was lowered by 31c per $100 assessed valuation through the tax differential last year. The remaining portion of the differential, 10c to 15c, will be dropped from this year's county tax rate.

How Much Will It Cost?

If the city were to sell the entire $6 million bond issue at one time with payments spread evenly, the cost would be $600,000 per year, said Weidenfeld. The current tax rate would have to be raised by about one-third, or 31c per $100 assessed valuation, in order to pay off the loan.

However, Weidenfeld explained to his audience, several factors will substantially reduce that impact: 1) we can pay back less at the beginning and more toward the end; 2) when we finish paying for the 1969 bond issue, those dollars can be used to help pay off the new bond issue; 3) in five years the tax base in Greenbelt is expected to double; 4) the bonds will be sold over several years as the various projects become ready, not all at once; 5) the tax differential will go a long way toward paying the costs for the first several years.

If, as is expected, the city's tax base grows at 10%, by 1987 the city can expect to have additional revenues in excess of $600,000 per year. By 1990, that figure could be $1.5 million, Weidenfeld stressed. "The city will be in a very good position financially." This growth will bring some burdens, he said, but also some benefits. "With this growth the city could potentially have a lower tax rate, but it would be better," he ventured, "to provide a better quality of life in Greenbelt."

History of Bond Issues

Over the years Greenbelt voters have approved some bond issues and not others, related White in presenting some history. In the early 60's the swimming pool was renovated and a diving well added at a cost of $250,000, but a decade later an indoor pool/health spa was turned down. A bond bill to finance repair of streets and curbs, and gutters was also rejected. In 1969 a very complex bond issue, similar to today's, was approved for $950,000. By adding state and federal funds, White continued, we accomplished "an astounding amount of projects." The city acquired eight parcels of park land, added a two-story wing to the municipal building, an addition to the firehouse, reconstructed the entrance to the city at Southway, developed parkland and built four tennis courts at Braden Field. In all the city had acquired more than $2 million worth of improvements by 1977.

Questions

Q. If you don't sell the bonds at one time, don't you risk paying higher interest?

A. Weidenfeld: Possibly. But this is a very big project and very diverse. We could not do it all at once. As a practical matter, the city would have to do it in stages.

Q. Dorothy Pyles: Hopefully the bond issue will pass. At some time in the future people who favored some project, might those people be disappointed and not get their project?

A. Weidenfeld: While council must determine some priorities, I would hope we would consider a vote for the bond issue as a mandate to do all the projects.

A. White: This would be a political decision. I hope council would keep the faith.

Q. Keith Chernikoff: You both know all of these projects can't be done for $6 million. The voters will feel betrayed if only $200,000 is spent for land acquisition and $5 million is spent on a new

Course On Bonds

how much it will cost. The city then goes to a bond underwriter who will purchase the entire issue and then resell the bonds to its clients, often in $5000 amounts.

G.O. bonds are considered attractive to investors, said Bonaparte, for two reasons. With the full backing of the city taxing authority, they are considered to be safe. In Maryland these bonds are exempt from state and federal taxes. A bond paying 9% interest earns the equivalent after taxes of double that amount for an investor in a 50% tax bracket.

In determining interest rates for a new bond issue, consideration is given to current market interest rates and to a bond rating. The higher the rating the more secure the bonds are and the lower the interest rate.

Growth in municipal bonds has been phenomenal, Bonaparte told the group. In 1972 the total amount of municipal bonds sold nationwide was $134 billion; by police station.

A. White: I wouldn't be bleak. There are other opportunities to accomplish some of these—program open space is currently at a low level, but it's still there. Block grants are under threat of loss, but are still there. There is seed money for some.

A. Weidenfeld: We should accomplish most.

Q. Steve Curtis: Assuming the (tax) impact to be negligible, why didn't you enlarge the scope, use more dollars to do everything?

A. Weidenfeld: It was a political decision to not go for a bond issue that citizens would feel was too high and not support, a compromise between those who wanted more and those who wanted less. It was more important that all five members of council support the bond issue.

1983 that total had increased to $450 billion. Several reasons for the growth, he said, were the great expansion of municipalities in the 70's, new schools for example, and the increased costs of construction.

Bonaparte listed the typical bond sales in this area: Prince Georges County last year sold $33 million for education, fire, police and county buildings; the City of Rockville sold $13.4 million and Hyattsville recently sold $654,000 for street repair and maintenance.

Questions

Betty Sonneveldt asked, "How do we as individuals buy these bonds—a lot of us may be interested?" In response Mayor Gil Weidenfeld assured her that pertinent information would be provided to citizens, probably through the News Review. "Is it possible for the city to hold back

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

There are three key elements to consider:

- A) Your needs: things you positively have to have.
- B) Your wants: things you'd like to have, but don't necessarily need.
- C) Your qualifications:
- 1) Your initial investment (cash to move in)
 - 2) Your total income (gross yearly income)
 - 3) Your debt service (total indebtedness)

I would like the opportunity to discuss with you how we can combine these three factors to assist you and your family in achieving your housing goals both within Greenbelt and the metropolitan area - of course with no obligation.

Council Actions

At its February 25 meeting the Council:

—Voiced strong opposition to State plans for (1) extension of Kenilworth Avenue north to Muirkirk Road and (2) construction of the proposed "inter-county connector. These two projects are listed as No. 10 and No. 15 in the new list of top priority highway projects for Prince Georges County. The city has opposed both for years.

—Will ask for proposals for auditing the city's books for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1985.

—Approved participation in a group purchase of gasoline, along with other members of the Council of Governments. The new contract is held by Tanner Petroleum of Alexandria, at the current price of .7724 for unleaded and .7409 for regular gasoline.

—Will pursue an agreement with George Christacos, owner of much of the Center for repair and improvement of the sidewalks, lighting, and landscaping in the Center.

—Directed staff to write a letter to Christacos, owner of the Utopia Theater building, asking for a postponement of the May 7 deadline he set for the Arts Center to begin to pay a significantly higher monthly rent or vacate the premises. The Arts Center has been participating with the city in its efforts to plan for rehabilitation of the Roosevelt Center. Plans now involve having Christacos, shop-keepers and residents of the community participate in the process. (See story in February 28 issue of this newspaper.)

—Will offer employees under the Maryland Employees Pension System a matching contribution (up to 5% of salary) to an appropriate deferred compensation plan. The city currently contributes 12.35% toward retirement benefits for employees under the old retirement system plus contributions to fund that system.

—Approved an ordinance requiring competitive bids for purchases of $5,000 and above (up from $2,500). Council also approved such exceptions to the rule as (1) waiving bid procedures by resolution of council, (2) cooperative bidding with the county or other governmental agency, (3) purchase of professional services or (4) from a utility or (5) another government. The city will continue to require advertising bids in one newspaper having circulation in Greenbelt, but not also in a second paper with county and city circulation, as has been required.

—Opposed a bill in the Maryland legislature requiring universal voter registration. The city prefers to keep its own voter rolls for city elections.

The "Bad Seed," Good Seeing

by Katherine Keene

It is worth going to see The Bad Seed currently at the Utopia Theater.

The Maxwell Anderson play was written soon after World War II, but is not a period piece. It revolves around two characters, a mother and her child. The mother eventually comes to understand that the child has a faulty gene resulting in a psychotic personality: talented, charming, cute, the little girl has no sense of right or wrong, and the play can only evolve tragically.

This may sound as if one were being invited to spend an evening in unmitigated gloom, but the empathy one feels for the characters and the excellent creation of the mother by Sandra Smith Hamlin do much to make it instead an evening of fascination. Flaws were present less because the actors were amateurs than because Maxwell Anderson's play strained coincidence too much: one of the characters is a writer on crime and just happens to relate a story about a female criminal whom the mother is able to recognize as having been her own mother! This was too much. Maxwell Anderson was one of the best known playwrights of his day, and he should have known better!

So laying blame where it deserves to be, the Greenbelt Players did a lot with it. The set was a convincing middle class living room. Costumes were not so obtrusive as to interfere with enjoyment of the character delineation and were appropriate to the parts played. The most demanding role, that of Christine, the mother, was particularly well done by Ms. Hamlin, who changed from a self-confident successful wife and mother at the opening to the doubt-ridden deeply troubled person she was at the conclusion.

Rhoda Penmark, the child around whom the play revolves, was played by Laura Shields, a 6th grader at St. Hugh's. Given a long part with much dialogue she never once missed a cue, never fumbled a line, and became Rhoda, leaving behind her usual self. In other words, she acted; she did not just go out on the stage and recite lines at appropriate moments.

The part of Monica, the self-righteous busy-body neighbor who prides herself on her understanding of Freudian psychology was played by Adele Mund who was making her first appearance at the Utopia. She played her role so convincingly that one could only hate her.

Having criticized the play itself for too much use of coincidence, it must be said that it moves along rapidly. Characters move about, enter, exit, establish their own identity with sufficient frequency to give the speed of the unrolling of the plot credibility. Speeches are all short, presenting the give-and-take of ordinary conversation, but of course that this was all so convincing was because the parts were acted convincingly. This was particularly true of Mrs. Daigle, the mother of the child who had drowned, played by Marie Tounsignant. We saw her only drunk, and the character could have seemed comic or farcical; instead she was tragic and believable, and it was possible to believe that she added to Christine's own sense of sorrowful guilt.

One could of course list pin-pricks, chief of which is a great need to oil the curtain or to do whatever else is needful to make it open and close without sounding something like a clanking freight train. In general the actors need to project their voices a bit more and to be more careful to pronounce final consonants. There was a little over-pronunciation, where words instead of being strung together as in ordinary speech were separate, each alone, like beads on a string.

However it was a good show, and Judy Holland, the director, should have been proud. It is worth seeing.

As a service to GHI members, GHI offers a Rehab Loan Deferral Program (RLDP). Under this program eligible members can defer part of their rehab charges. Thus these members have extra money available each month for other necessities. Many GHI members may be eligible to participate in the program. GHI members currently participating in the program find it useful for handling changing financial situations such as retirement, a change from full-time to part-time work, and money troubles. The income eligibility limits are as follows:

Number In Household	Income Eligibility Limit
1	18,200
2	20,800
3	23,400
4	26,000
5	27,600
6	29,250
7	30,850
8+	32,500

RLDP participants may defer as much as $70 of their rehab payment each month. This deferral does not need to be repaid until the home is sold. The loan is assessed a mere 3% accrued interest.

AN ORDINANCE TO AUTHORIZE AND EMPOWER THE CITY OF GREENBELT, FROM TIME TO TIME, TO BORROW NOT MORE THAN SIX MILLION DOLLARS ($6,000,000) FOR THE PUBLIC PURPOSES DESCRIBED HEREIN, AND TO EFFECT SUCH BORROWING BY THE ISSUANCE AND SALE, UPON ITS FULL FAITH AND CREDIT, OF ITS GENERAL OBLIGATION BONDS IN LIKE PAR AMOUNT PURSUANT TO THE AUTHORITY OF SECTIONS 31 TO 37, INCLUSIVE, OF ARTICLE 23A OF THE ANNOTATED CODE OF MARYLAND (1981 REPLACEMENT VOLUME AND 1984 CUMULATIVE SUPPLEMENT) AND SECTION 55 OF THE CITY CHARTER; PROVIDING FOR THE APPROPRIATION AND DISPOSAL OF THE PROCEEDS OF SALE OF THE BONDS; PROVIDING FOR THE LEVY AND COLLECTION OF TAXES SUFFICIENT FOR THE PROMPT PAYMENT OF THE MATURING PRINCIPAL OF AND INTEREST ON THE BONDS AND GENERALLY RELATING TO THE ISSUANCE, SALE AND PAYMENT OF THE BONDS.

BE IT ORDAINED by the Council of the City of Greenbelt, Maryland that:

SECTION 1: Pursuant to the authority of Sections 31 to 37, inclusive, of Article 23A of the Annotated Code of Maryland (1981 Replacement Volume and 1984 Cumulative Supplement) and Section 55 of the Charter of the City of Greenbelt (the "Charter"), the City of Greenbelt (the "City") is hereby authorized and empowered to borrow money and incur indebtedness for the public purposes described in Section 2 hereof, at one time or from time to time, in an amount not exceeding, in the aggregate, Six Million Dollars ($6,000,000), and to evidence such borrowing by the issuance and sale, upon its full faith and credit, of general obligation bonds in like par amount, which may be issued at one time or from time to time, in one or more groups or series, as the City may determine.

SECTION 2. SECTION 3. The proceeds of sale of the bonds authorized to be issued hereunder, including any premium and accrued interest received therefore, shall be deposited in the proper account or accounts of the City. There shall be deducted from the total gross proceeds received from the sale of said bonds the cost of issuing the same, including the cost of all printing, legal fees and other reasonably related expenses. The balance of the proceeds of the sale of said bonds shall be expended for the public purposes described in Section 2 hereof, and said proceeds are hereby appropriated for said purposes.

Can Cavities Be Prevented?

You can prevent or at least substantially reduce dental decay (cavities) in three ways. First, by making the teeth stronger to resist decay through the use of fluorides. Second, by limiting the amount of sugar in the diet, which is the "food" for decay-causing bacteria. Third, by keeping the mouth clean and free of plaque through proper brushing and flossing.

Your family dentist can advise on the best form of fluoride and individual needs, as well as offer guidance on proper nutrition and home care procedures.

CITY NOTES

The General Crew assisted the contractor in the shop and animal compound. They also began preparing asphalt base at the fire house for repair work on the parking lot. The general crew also installed storm drains at the Youth Center. They assisted the special trash driver one day while the driver for the special trash truck was driving the city bus. A piano was moved by the general crew to the Utopia Theater. The electrician worked at the J. C. Club House building replacing the wiring damage that was done by vandals during the prior week.

The Parks Crew worked on the ball fields and general park maintenance. The Parks foreman along with the Director of Recreation made a survey of parks equipment and found that several pieces of the heavy wooden equipment are in need of major repair. The poles securing the equipment to the ground have deteriorated because of contact with the earth, so it will be necessary to replace several of the lower sections of these poles.

Amusement parks in the area. The actual tickets will be on sale, at the Youth Center, beginning Friday, April 5, from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Monday thru Friday. Purchases may also be made on Saturdays, 9 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. The parks participating this year are Hershey Park, King's Dominion, Wild World, Busch Gardens and Great Adventure Safari. These tickets allow unlimited use of all rides and attractions at each park attended during the 1985 season. This special discount program is sponsored for the benefit of the Maryland Recreation and Parks Association to continue its efforts in improving conservation, parks and recreation in Maryland. Support MRPA and save money on future amusement park trips at the same time.

On Saturday, March 16, the Greenbelt Intramural Basketball Championship was won in double-overtime by the Blue Team, coached by Roger and Jan Johnson. The team, ages 8 through 12, had its impressive defense boosted by an offense led by Jonathan Schachter who scored a season high 20 points in the game. The championship team's other players were David DeHaven, Dante Dinkins, Jason Everhart, Jeannie McCarthy, Mark McCoy, Scott McCoy, and Brian Smith. The Blue Team beat Bill and Barb Van Wambeke's Red Team 29 to 25 for the tournament title. It was a great season for all four teams, and the intramural program continues to provide Greenbelt children with a well organized, competitive basketball learning experience.

March, 1935 50 Years Ago

by Don Volk

In March 1935 the shape of the new towns program was not at all clear. Tugwell and his associates knew that they wanted to build a number of planned suburban communities. They hoped that money would be made available by Congress and the President. They were not sure how many towns would be constructed, what size they would be, or where they would be located. They were fairly sure that if the program were approved, one of the towns would be in the Washington, D.C. area, and after the February visit by Tugwell, Lansill and Richards to the Beltsville National Agricultural Research Center, planning commenced to acquire nearby land for this purpose. They reasoned that if the new towns program did not materialize, the land could be used for other purposes. (In fact about three-fourths of the 12,000+ acres acquired was later transferred to the Agricultural Research center for its use.)

By early March the Land Utilization Division of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration began taking options adjacent to the Agricultural Center for what they called Maryland Special Project No. 1. It was later referred to variously as the Beltsville Project, the Berwyn Project, and finally the Greenbelt Project.

Meanwhile, debate continued in Congress over appropriations requested by Roosevelt to fund the various New Deal projects.

Springhill Lake Elementary Students Move into Computer Age at School

by Willimina G. Lawrence
Teachers, students, and parents working together have set up a computer learning program at Springhill Lake Elementary School. According to the school's principal, Stan Kline, the funds for this program (which started in 1983) were raised through projects such as selling cake and candy, cheese and sausage, and through children's picture sales.

Because of budgetary constraints, the Board of Education could not allocate funds for this program. Therefore, the direction had to come from the school itself.

Walt Rau, who teaches a remedial class here, and a former teacher, Lee Meiners, were the pilots of this program. They started the ball rolling when they brought in their own computers as teaching aids.

Kline said, "I was impressed with the results and became convinced that this would be a worthwhile program. I felt that there was a serious need for elementary schools to keep up with high technology in today's fast-paced society."

Kline called on parents to work with the teachers and students in setting up the program. They helped the school convert old, excess science furniture into computer furniture.

A centralized computer system was set up in the old science room. Special periods were designated for training.

Kline also found volunteers—a county parochial school teacher and Department of Defense Ph.D. engineers—to act as tutors.

At present the school owns 10 computers. Eight are located in the main computer room. One is in the principal's office.

The other computer, in Rau's classroom, is used by his regular students and by other students within the school.

The computers are also used by students with learning handicaps who live in the Northern area of Prince Georges County. They come from Adelphi, Laurel, College Park, and other Greenbelt schools.

These students need special tutoring in subjects ranging from math to creative writing.

According to Kline the program has been a boon to learning. He stated, "There are no disciplinary problems among students using computers."

As one student put it, "We're kept too busy."

Goals of Program

Students undertake computer training on their own initiative.

Kline described four main purposes to the school's computer program. The first is to teach computer literacy and how to load, talk to and make the computer work for the student.

The second purpose is to have students understand computer language and logo basics of micro computers.

The third purpose is to use the computer as a teaching machine in academic subjects for drills, for example in spelling and multiplication.

The fourth is to use the computer as a word processor to create or use language or to help with learning or language problems.

"Computers also encourage team-building and collaboration among students," Kline stated.

At present the school is using Commodore computers and hardware. The software is either purchased or made up by the program leaders.

As successful as the program has been, however, Kline does not plan to set up computers in other rooms until more teachers are trained.

"I don't want to see computers gather dust," he said.

At present Kline and 16 of his teachers are enrolled in a micro computer course funded by the Prince Georges County Staff Development Office.

Some of those taking this course are among the school's most experienced teachers. They attend classes three hours a week after work.

"Computers are not a trendy or an in-vogue thing," Kline emphasized. "they are becoming common, and many people even believe they are essential."

"Some people fear computers because they think they will eliminate jobs," he continued. "But I believe that they are not meant to replace school personnel, but to help students learn and help teachers teach."
